

A Gentle Spring Reset for Your Setting

You don't need to change everything this week. Just notice one thing.

Spring often makes everything feel like it should speed up. More ideas.

More resources.
More activities.

But sometimes the most powerful shift comes from noticing what is already working well.

Use this page as a quiet check-in with your space rather than a list of things to change.

What is already working well here this week?

Which books are already working well?

What could quietly step back for now?

What are the children already returning to without prompting?

What could become lighter next week instead of fuller?

This page was inspired by the Spring issue of Not Just a Childminder, written for the adult behind the setting at this exact point in the season.

@notjustachildminder